

Sita:

Sita lives with her husband and two daughters. Her husband migrates to Udaipur City (22 kms from his village) for wage-labor. Sita stays at home to look after her daughters and works on her agriculture farm when needed. Her elder daughter Puma is now three years old and the younger one Babli is three months.

In Seva Mandir-run Immunization Camps Babli has received three shots so far. When the camp started Puma's immunization was incomplete and so she was given rest of the shots at Seva Mandir-run Camps. Sita is very happy to be able to get her daughters immunized because the Government health care facilities are quite far from her village.

Sita says –“ I come to the Immunization Camps and all my other friends in the village also come to these camps for getting their children immunized. Earlier the Government Nurse used to come to our village. But she was very irregular and her visits were uncertain. I like Seva Mandir Camps. Because the camps are regular and are held close to our homes.”

(The names of the people in the story have been changed)